

Course Title: Lymphology 101 - Lipedema

Course Description: Lymphology 101, Lipedema, is a 1-hour course designed for the intermediate clinician working with patients affected by lipedema. Lipedema is present in approximately 11% of the population and is most common in women. Patients with lipedema are seen by allied health care specialists and massage therapists and lipedema is a condition that effects all areas of an individual's life. This course will begin with a review of the condition including clinical definition, signs and symptoms. Pathophysiology and physiology of lipedema will be discussed along with the complications of lipedema and the combination of lipedema presenting with other conditions. Prognosis, diagnosis and differential diagnosis will also be covered. Pictorial illustrations and photographs are used to highlight clinical cases.
